

Abstract

Titel:

Case study of physiotherapy treatment of a patient with the diagnosis of the fracture of the distal antebrachium

Goals:

The goal of this thesis is to summarize theoretical and practical information about fracture of distal antebrachium, to peruse sources of this problems and to concieve adequate therapy.

Methods:

The theoretical part is describing anatomy and functional kinesiology of the antebrachium and hand, then fractures of the distal antebrachium. The thesis considers mostly conservative treatment, complications of treatment and following therapy.

The practical part is the describing aplication of gained theoretical knowledges about concrete diagnosis. It contains incoming kineziological assessment and conclusion, which makes short-term rehabilitation plan. This part is also decribing the process of therapeutical units, outcoming kineziological assessment and final evaluation of the therapy.

Key words:

antebrachium, hand, accident, physiotherapy